Orange tents are lighting up the jamboree

You cannot miss it. The orange dome tents are lighting up the range of hills in Subcamp Høje-Taastrup, and if you get close, many recognise the logo of Roskilde Festival.

65 participants from Ukraine stay in the tents. Jamboree Denmark has succeeded in ensuring donations in the amount of 600,000 Danish kroner to the special effort for Ukraine from Lauritzen-Fonden, the A.P. Møller Foundation and Rotary. In addition to this, Roskilde Festival has donated tents and sleeping bags.

Ukraine is in high focus right now due to the ongoing war. The guide and scout leader Tamila says that the sounds of low flying helicopters, that several times has flown across the jamboree, has frightened many of the Ukrainian guides and scouts.

They are still very happy to be at the jamboree, and for all the help they have received. Among other things to build a table to eat, pioneering and building with poles is not something they are used to where they are from in Kiev.

The guide and scout Polina says they have met many helpful and kind people since they arrived at the jamboree. She writes down their names at her jamboree map.

An invitation to stop by Tamila would like to invite all to come by their camp site by the orange tents, and talk to them about Ukraine, a country she is proud to come from. Polina affirms the invitation, and she expresses her gratitude to Jamboree Denmark and all the Danish guides and scouts for inviting them to Denmark. "I hope that you will soon get an opportunity to visit Ukraine too. It is an amazing and unique country", says Polina.

"Jeg håber, at I også snart får en chance for at besøge Ukraine. Det er et fantastisk og unikt land," slutter Polina.

Invitation to unusual religious services

You are invited to attend a one-hour non-traditional religious service on Tuesday at 4.00 pm and again at 8.00 pm at Jamboree Denmark.

At the service, we will discover that religion and science go hand in hand to answer the question about the meaning of life.

If your group has brought a flag, please bring it for the flag guard during the service.

It is activity number 1158 and registration is required. However, everybody can drop in if there is room.

Exciting drop-in activities Tuesday
